I feel that allowing cellphone usage on airplanes would be not only an irritant to passengers, but also could interfere with safety measures for passengers. Airplanes are already crowded and passengers are already irritated enough by delays, crowds and small and confined seating - adding the noise and distraction of phone conversations to this already tense setting would not be a good decision for either the airlines future or for public safety reasons.